Note:

NO LAWYER OR INVESTIGATING OFFICER MAY CONTACT ANY JUDGE AND DISCUSS ANY MATTER THAT IS ALREADY ON THE COURTROLL WETHER THAT JUDGE IS ATTENDING TO THE MATTER OR NOT.

THE RULING OF THE COURT IS FINAL.

The Policing Department

Policing Department:

- a. LSPD and BSCO will be requested to make a court orderly available on each of the court sitting days when bail cases are heard by the court.
- b. Any corrupt activities in any society will be investigated by the Detectives of the policing department and then handed over to court for further processing. Defendants in these matters should not be jailed by PD and should be handled in terms of Criminal Matters.
- c. If an officer fails to issue the Miranda Rights to a suspect at the appropriate time during an arrest or detainment, any charges or fines associated with the incident must be dismissed, and the suspect must be released immediately. This policy ensures adherence to due process and the protection of individuals' constitutional rights.
- d. For safety reasons, officers are not required to read the Miranda Rights at the scene of an arrest. This can be done at the police department once the suspect is in a secure holding cell. However, if a suspect is detained and questioned, their rights must be read before questioning to ensure compliance with due process.
- e. Officers involved in a case must attend court hearings when subpoenaed or requested by the DOJ. Failure to appear may result in case dismissal and a review of the officer's conduct.
- f. The PD is required to comply with all court orders promptly, including release directives, expungement requests, and subpoenas. Any deviation must be communicated to the court and justified appropriately.

Criminal Matters

- The court may issue a harsher sentence than PD as the crime committed would be of an extreme nature, currently the maximum sentence imposed by court would be normal PD rate - +5%
 - The court may issue a more lenient sentence than PD if the defendant is able to mitigate their actions, currently the least amount of sentence issued by court will be normal pd rate - 25%
 - The court may find a defendant not guilty, which will result in any fines paid for the crime having to be reimbursed by the department that fined the defendant.
- a. If a person is jailed by PD and does not agree with the sentence such person will be able to appeal to the court. A court sitting will be scheduled and if it is found that the person was correctly jailed such person will be given a heftier sentence by the court, which will minimally be the same sentence as previously received. If it is found that the person was wrongly jailed such person will be awarded a monetary restitution that must be paid by the PD officer that wrongly jailed the person. PD may opt to pay on behalf of the member, by choice.
- b. Warrants of arrest must be approved by a court before loaded on any system. Any warrant of arrest issued by court must be loaded on the system by the court orderly.
- All warrants issued will be valid for 4 days.
- c. If an urgent warrant is needed, and a judge is not available via email in a timeous fashion, an application must still be made to court, but in that circumstance a high command or person delegated by high command may authorize such warrant. Such decision must be fully substantiated in the application, including the full details of the person that authorized the warrant. PD is urged not to use this process lightly because if the person against who the warrant was issued, lays a complaint and it is substantiated and accepted, the person that approved the warrant will be held liable.

Objections

Different Objections that can be made in Court:

Objection: Relevance - This objection is raised when the presented evidence or line of questioning is not directly related to the case at hand or does not have any bearing on the issues being discussed.

Objection: Hearsay - Hearsay refers to an out-of-court statement presented in court to prove the truth of the matter asserted. This objection is raised when a statement is offered as evidence, but it was made by someone who is not present in court to testify and cannot be cross-examined.

Objection: Leading the witness - This objection is raised when an attorney asks a question that suggests or prompts the desired answer from the witness. Leading questions are generally not allowed during direct examination but are allowed during cross-examination.

Objection: Speculation - If a witness is asked to provide an opinion or make an inference based on incomplete or insufficient information, the opposing attorney may object on the grounds of speculation.

Objection: Cumulative evidence - When evidence is repetitious and adds nothing new or relevant to the case, an objection can be made on the grounds of being cumulative.

Objection: Privilege - Certain communications, such as those between an attorney and client, doctor and patient, or spouses, are protected by privilege. If a question seeks privileged information, an objection can be raised.

Objection: Character evidence - Character evidence involves introducing evidence about a person's character or disposition to prove their conduct in a particular situation. Such evidence is often deemed irrelevant and inadmissible, except in specific circumstances. This might not always be used as all evidence must be shown to all parties beforehand.

Objection: Lack of foundation - This objection is raised when the attorney believes that the proponent of the evidence has not established a proper foundation for its introduction. It means that the necessary preliminary questions establishing the relevance and authenticity of the evidence have not been asked.

Objection: Improper form of questioning - Attorneys may object if a question is argumentative, badgering, compound (multiple questions in one), or assumes facts not in evidence. These objections aim to maintain proper courtroom decorum and ensure fair proceedings.

Objection: Violation of rules of evidence - Attorneys may object if the opposing party or the court violates specific rules of evidence, such as introducing evidence that was illegally obtained or failing to disclose evidence in a timely manner.

Motions

Motions that can be requested in Court:

Motion to Dismiss: This motion asks the court to dismiss all or part of a case, usually claiming that the opposing party has failed to state a valid legal claim or that the court lacks jurisdiction over the matter.

Motion for Summary Judgment: This motion seeks a judgment in favour of the moving party without a full trial. It asserts that there are no genuine issues of material fact in dispute and that the moving party is entitled to judgment as a matter of law.

Motion to Suppress Evidence: This motion asks the court to exclude specific evidence from being admitted at trial. It argues that the evidence was obtained illegally, in violation of constitutional rights, or through other improper means.

Motion in Limine: This motion seeks a pretrial ruling on the admissibility of certain evidence. It asks the court to prohibit the opposing party from introducing certain evidence or mentioning specific facts during trial.

Motion for Continuance: This motion requests a postponement or rescheduling of a scheduled court proceeding. It is usually made when a party needs additional time to prepare their case, gather evidence, or obtain the presence of a necessary witness.

Motion for Discovery: This motion seeks to obtain information, documents, or evidence from the opposing party through the discovery process. It asks the court to order the other party to produce requested materials or answer specific interrogatories.

Motion for Change of Venue: This motion asks the court to transfer the case to a different location or jurisdiction. It is made when a party believes that a fair trial cannot be obtained in the current venue due to prejudicial publicity, bias, or other reasons.

Motion for Protective Order: This motion seeks an order from the court to protect a party from harassment, annoyance, or undue burden during the discovery process. It may request limitations on the scope or manner of discovery or the issuance of a confidentiality order.

Procedure to Follow When Releasing a Suspect on Bail

- Arrest: Police officers should have a valid reason, such as witnessing a crime or having substantial evidence, to arrest a suspect within the boundaries of the city laws.
- Processing: Once the suspect is arrested, officers should escort them to a designated police station or holding cell, where their personal information and alleged charges are recorded.
- Informing the Suspect: The PD officer must then inform the suspect that they have a choice to be released on bail specifically because they have been accused of committing federal crimes and explain the bail procedure to the suspect.
- Releasing the Suspect: The PD officer must proceed to release the suspect according to the appropriate legal procedures. Officers should ensure that the suspect's information, including the bail amount and any conditions, is properly recorded before the release.
- Informing the State Prosecutor: The PD officer should promptly inform the state prosecutor about the case, providing them with all the relevant information for further legal proceedings.
- Appearing in Court: The arresting officer will be required to appear in court and provide testimony as a witness against the suspect in the legal proceedings. (Please take note that if you cannot appear in court then the state prosecutor needs to be notified, also provide the prosecutor with names of officers that were present on scene with you.)

- If a PD officer is found guilty of contempt of court, the case will be handled internally, with specific orders to produce documentation to the court on the punishment received.
